

CHATEAU HAUT-BRION

Château Bahans Haut-Brion

1999

Château Haut-Brion's tasting notes :

Rich in hue, this wine's nose is infused with discreet hints of oak and the tannins are well structured and striking at the initial attack. But these rather imposing tannins are actually both mellow and firm. Fine and softly granular, they give an elegant palate-coating mouth feel. The beautiful and expressive nose is dominated by blackberry and red fruit flavors. At the finish, the very characteristic Haut-Brion tannins again come to the fore, equally firm and silky.

Weather conditions

Sum of temperatures : 3495 °C

Rain : 567 mm

Days where temperature above 30 °C : 19

Harvest : from 30/08/1999 to 24/09/1999

Current vintage notes

The last year of the millennium will be remembered for several extraordinary meteorological events. First came the eclipse of the sun on August 11th. The second phenomena consisted of two extremely violent storms that struck the Sud-Ouest. One came on August 7th and was severe but short lived and the second struck on December 27th with an unprecedented violence. It lasted from sundown until the wee hours of the morning with the hiatus being between 8PM to 10PM. It wreaked havoc on the entire region. Ultimately, 1999 was a relatively hot year and 2% warmer than the mean temperatures recorded during the past forty years. This is a considerable difference. For the most part the year will go down as one with brutal climactic events. July was dry with the exception of three days of violent storms. In a few hours the rainfall surpassed 35% of the usual July precipitation. The rain continued at the beginning of August but the weather changed abruptly at the time of the eclipse on August 11th. For one month not a drop fell. September 20th suddenly torrential rain returned spilling 79 millimetres in one day, a quota that entailed 125% of the usual rainfall for the entire month of September.

Domaine Clarence Dillon

Copyright SAS Domaine Clarence Dillon